

LOVERS

Inspired by Valentine's Day and the promise of free champagne, the latest in our series of Projects Reunited is less about reuniting old friends than celebrating those special unions that have stood the test of time. We took four happy couples that met through the construction industry for a trip on the London Eye – including the husband and wife team that designed it, David Marks and Julia Barfield. The couples told Mark Leftly, Sonia Soltani, Martin Spring and Nick Jones about their romantic adventures. More on the team that built the Eye can be found on www.projectsreunited.com
Photography by Nick David

IN THE

AIR

The artist and the accountant
Paul Sandilands and Maja Serenski

They met on the South Bank, he proposed on the South Bank, they were interviewed by Building on the South Bank ...

The secretary and the boss' son
Paul and Pauline Hurford

Paul's QS dad played Cupid for these young lovers when they were in their teens

Mills and Boon
Marcus Wilshere and Jacqui Bailey

Could this design consultant and architecture assistant be construction's most loved-up couple?

The proud parents
David Marks and Julia Barfield

The London Eye is like a fourth child to the first couple of British architecture